

1. Irwin Water Bath

Introducing a compact, cost effective water bath for general lab use. The water bath is based around a deep Gratnell's tray and features a sealed silicone heating element and digital temperature controller. The unit comes complete with an aluminium test tube rack and translucent lid.

Two models are available. One which will operate at any selected temperature up to 60°C and a more advanced version that will offer up to 100°C. Accuracy is to within 1 degree of the selected temperature. Supplied with a fixed 1.5 mains cable and mains plug. Will operate with amounts of water from 2 to 8 litres. May be stored in a Gratnell's trolley when not in use.

3. NanoHeat® Hotplate Advanced Waterbath

The NanoHeat® Waterbath's compact design enables it to be easily moved and transported. The electronic control ensures reliable bath temperature with +/- 1°C variance. The temperature adjusts at 1°C intervals. It is easy to set up and carry out multiple experiments simultaneously at different temperatures with several water baths. Its flexible usage allows it to be used separately from the bath container for heating purposes. Operation is from an LED display touch screen allowing easy temperature selection.

Features:

- Safe
- Energy efficient
- Compact and easy to store
- Rapid heating saves time
- Unique setting allows monitoring of liquid temperature
